PREFACE

Presumption is a dangerous fault. It compels men to think they alone possess strength, ability, wisdom, justice, perfection. Self-worship perhaps would be a better name for it. There is nothing more fatal for a young nation than to be self-conceited and to believe that it possesses talents, refinement, creative power, etc., which in reality it does not have. Culture, progress and civilization are acquired only after prolonged efforts, diligently applied, especially to one self.

As is the case with every well educated man, every enlightened nation should be a Socrates to itself. A cultured people may not be endowed with the genius and wisdom of the Athenian philosopher, but their intellectual class should never forget the saying: « Know thyself ».

To know oneself is to be enlightened. That is the anti-thesis to presumption. He who fails to know himself, and thinks himself greater than he is, lives in ignorance and darkness, and disappointments are in store for him. But let us not forget that the man who goes to the other extreme — self-abasement through exaggerated modesty — is in no better predicament.

The Balkan peoples do not possess a true knowledge of themselves. Some of them suffer from vanity, others from under-estimation of their own abilities and culture; some of them idolize themselves, others are victims of their over-modesty. Though they have lived for centuries in close contact with each other, they do not know each other, they did not penetrate each other's soul, they did not even try to judge each other's character and capacities impartially. It is a melancholy fact to witness how haughtily some of the Balkan nations treat their neighbours, in consequence of which the latter are always suspicious and distrustful of others. The causes of this intense estrangement are many and remote; they are historical, psychological, and temperamental.

Cherishing the same esteem towards all the peoples of the Balkan Peninsula, we are bound to judge them not by their words, but by their deeds, and above all by what they have accomplished and are doing for their education, development, and culture. The primary characteristic of an enlightened people is their love for learning and progress, and the sacrifice they are ever willing to make for their moral and intellectual progress. Unquestionably the educational institutions of a nation are the safe standard by which one may judge the grade of its cultural accomplishment. In Western Europe, the most advanced peoples are considered not those which are biggest, but those, which have built the most and best equipped schools, which boast of the most modern and democratic primary, secondary, and higher institutions of learning, and spend most to develop the intellect of the inhabitants of the country.

The Balkan states also possess their own schools and spend considerable sums for their maintenance. Some of those states, however, have gone so far as to parade as Kulturträgers in the East. Such statements have frequently been made in the capitals of some of those states.

What in reality is the standard of the educational system and the intellectual level of their respective countries? What is the grade of cultural advancement in Roumania, Greece, Serbia and Bulgaria? These are questions deserving the careful attention of all who are interested in the subject.

This question has been adequately elucidated by the official statistics of the respective states. The hard facts and figures contained in them give a most eloquent description of the educational and cultural level attained by them. The data furnished by the various statistics are not the work of a politician, diplomatist or hot-headed patriot, but the results of scientific investigation.

In order that the progress of the several Balkan states may be more clearly seen, it was found necessary to resort to a comparison with a criterium established by an older and far more advanced country. The educational system of Switzerland, and particularly of the Bern Canton, has been selected as such a criterium. Switzerland was picked out because it has generally been accepted as a model on the point of general education and culture. The Canton of Bern was particularly considered not only because it is the largest political unit of the Swiss Republic, but also because it is much smaller than any of the Balkan countries. This volume deals with the school statistics of Switzerland, Roumania, Greece, Servia, and Bulgaria in 1908. We are compelled to select that period of time, because Roumania and Serbia possess printed statistics only up to that year inclusive. As to Greece, since she has no earlier statistical data in print, we had to limit ourselves to the statistical books published by her for the years 1900-1911. Bulgaria has published her educational statistics regularly from 1900 till 1911 inclusive. The Balkan wars have prevented Bulgaria, as well as her neighbours, Greece, Servia and Roumania from publishing any statistics since 1911. Switzerland, however, has been able to issue her school data uninterruptedly up to 1917 inclusive.

Lausanne, 31st January 1919.

¹ With 8,445,397 frs. more, the expenses of the central administration, libraries, theaters &c., would be covered, which would make a total of francs 30,619,405. But even then Roumania would keep her rank, but with a cost of fr. 4.35 per inhabitant. In this hypothesis, it would be also necessary to increase the expenses for Switzerland by 2,073,378 fr. and for the Canton of Berne by 137,060 fr., sums which the Confederation grants for constructions, repairs, &c.
